Kast

Medium

Red gum (determined by microanalysis), yellow pine, and tulip poplar

Description

The traditional kast form in two parts. A wide cornice attached to the cupboard section projects over a pair of doors with central raised panels framed by applied moldings. The center stile is not architectural but is attached to the right door. The center, left, and right stiles have pairs of narrow vertical panels framed by applied moldings. Short, horizontal molding pieces, known as glyphs, are applied above, between, and below these narrow vertical panels. The base section includes a single drawer with molded edges and turned wooden knobs. The base is ornamented with three diamond shaped, molded panels set at center, left, and right. The entire piece rests on two massive turned ball front feet, and a pair of simple board back feet. The doors open to reveal an interior fitted with two full-depth shelves and a third half-depth upper shelf. The kast retains an early if not original finish.
