

Basic Detail Report

Weathervane

Medium

Sheet iron, tin, and zinc

Description

A flat silhouette-style weathervane in the form of a galloping horse, cut from sheet iron and painted bright yellow. The horse's head faces down, with a jagged mane and outstretched tail. The bottom portions of both rear legs have been riveted to the main sections, a later repair or replacement. The horse is riveted to an iron rod, which in turn is inserted into an ornamental dome-shaped mount shaped of tin panels that end in a bottom edge cut into points. The wooden support column originally attached to the underside of the dome.
