

Bye Lo Baby

Medium

Bisque porcelain, composition, cotton, cotton batting

Description

A baby doll, commercially named the Bye Lo Baby, consisting of a bisque porcelain head with delicately painted hair and facial features. The head, which is marked "Copr. by Grace S. Putnam" on the nape of the neck, attaches to a stuffed cloth body. The doll's arms and legs are made of composition, a form of molded lightweight glue and sawdust mixture. The doll is dressed in a cotton batiste long gown, made for an actual infant sometime in the late 19th or early 20th century.
