Description

A woman's fitted cape, known as a dolman, made of rich brown and rust colored silk velvet, in an overall foliate scroll pattern. The cape is constructed with a hook and eye front closure, standup collar, peaked shoulder caps, long front lappets, shaped elbow length open sleeves, all trimmed with knotted golden tan silk fringe ending in elongated silk cord covered bobbles. The inside of the dolman cape is lined, most likely with a wool flannel layer, and a quilted silk lining. The inside back of the cape retains its original grosgrain ribbon waist stay tape.
