Description

Depiction of a typical Monmouth County farmstead under a brilliant sunset sky with a white one-and-a-half story house to the right connected to a single story rear kitchen wing. Behind it to the left is a smoke house or out house. A large red barn with attached double corn crib and wagon house is on the left, and the yard is surrounded by a white rail fence. A well house appears in the yard behind or to the left of the barn. A grove of trees has been depicted behind the farmstead, and another in the left distance. A road cuts across the painting, dividing the farmstead from its field in the foreground. The field is being plowed in long parallel rows by an African-American farm hand. The plow is being pulled by a brown horse.
